

Lewes Futurescan Project

Sussex County, Delaware is experiencing a period of unprecedented growth, and the town of Lewes is no exception. Rising home prices and the expansive development taking place in Lewes have led to concerns on the part of the residents. The Lewes Futurescan project is designed to study and inform the Lewes residents and development stakeholders on what impacts the current development trends will have on the town over the next ten years.

The Futurescan project will review documents concerning the development in Lewes, and prepare a report on the trends in Lewes development. Once this document is prepared, the project will undergo an iterative process of meetings with stakeholders and residents to inform them of these themes, with the hope that the stakeholders and residents will be more informed of the issues, and subsequently make development decisions to remedy some of these issues.
