

Ecosystem Based Management: The Magnuson Stevens Act and the Endangered Species Act

Ecosystem based management considers the various components of a complex system when implementing management measures. Notable examples of ecosystem based management have been implemented through the Magnuson Stevens Act. This presentation considers an example of ecosystem based management for fisheries and endangered species management and proposes enhancement of management approaches in an ecosystem based context.

Kaja Brix