The Institute for Global Studies Presents the Inaugural Lecture Series

SPRING 2015

“Fulbright Before Med School: The Best Decision I Ever Made”
Tuesday, April 7, 5:30 p.m.,
Roselle Center for the Arts, Gore Recital Hall
Kimberly Stevenson, UD 2010, Fulbright 2011 (United Kingdom)
Join us for the first lecture of our inaugural series with UD Honors alumna and current Georgetown medical student, Kimberly Stevenson. Stevenson shares insights into “what seemed to be a daunting and impossible task” of applying for a Fulbright award, her subsequent experience as a Fulbright Scholar in the UK, and how the Fulbright program continues to touch her life today. Stay on for the post-lecture reception to engage with other past and future Fulbright recipients. Co-sponsored with the University of Delaware Honors Program.

“Women’s Empowerment through Fulbright: A Personal Reflection”
Thursday, April 9, 7:30 p.m., Trabant MPR C
Elaine Salo, UD Associate Professor of Political Science, International Relations, and Women and Gender Studies, Fulbright 1984-86 (U.S.)
In our second lecture, Dr. Salo reflects upon the value and meaning of the Fulbright scholarship in her personal career trajectory, and as a means of supporting diversity and women’s empowerment in South Africa through higher education. In celebration of UD South Africa Month.

“The Middle East in Crisis: Causes and Prospects”
Monday, April 27, 7 p.m., Mitchell Hall
Juan Cole, University of Michigan, Fulbright-Hayes Fellow 1982 (India) and 1985-86 (Egypt), and Bassam Haddad, George Mason University
The Fulbright Lecture Series joins with the CGAS spring lecture series, “Globalization, Organized Crime, & Terrorist Networks,” to examine diverse manifestations of organized crime and terrorism around the globe from a multidisciplinary perspective. Co-sponsored with the Center for Global & Area Studies.
