New Approaches to Teaching and Learning

Delaware is squarely focused on driving student achievement. With funding from Race to the Top and the School Improvement Grant program, there’s unprecedented opportunity to infuse Delaware’s K-12 public schools, especially those with the greatest needs, with additional resources, greater flexibility, and new supports for educators and students, alike. In return, we must require greater accountability from all parties. National and local panelists will discuss new approaches to teaching and learning and demonstrate the possibilities for building a climate for success—spurring innovation, focusing on results, and ensuring accountability—so that every Delaware student is provided an excellent education that ensures post-secondary success.

Delaware’s New Statewide Goals and Initiatives for Early Childhood Education

Investing in high-quality early education for our youngest Delawareans is a shared goal among parents, policymakers, educators, and citizens. Over the last several years, Delaware has made important progress through collaborative efforts, including codifying Delaware Stars for Early Success (a quality rating and improvement system), establishing the State’s Early Childhood Council, and creating “Early Success,” Delaware’s early childhood plan. Beginning in 2009, the “Policy Matters” initiative established a clear vision and actionable strategies for statewide improvements to early childhood education. The goals, role, and membership of the Early Childhood Council have been reconfigured and strengthened, a new strategic plan is in development that builds upon and accelerates earlier initiatives, an enhanced statewide data system for early childhood is being created, and steps are being taken to strengthen the alignment and effectiveness of State early childhood programs and policies.

Introductions and Session Moderator: Connie Bond Stuart, President, PNC Bank, Delaware, and Vice Chair, Delaware Early Childhood Council
