The focus on workplace diversity has increased in recent years, and the impact of diversity is dramatically transforming the nature of workplaces everywhere. While increasing diversity is a positive thing, it can present challenges which are difficult to predict, and responding inappropriately can have consequences. This puts effective communication at the forefront of a healthy working environment. Dr. Cullen will present skills on how to relate across differences and how to bridge the communication gap. She will also address something often overlooked: how Baby Boomers, Gen X-ers and the Millennials can learn from each other to create cohesion in the workplace.
