Adjunct Faculty Positions, Department of Women and Gender Studies

The Department of Women and Gender Studies at the University of Delaware is currently recruiting qualified instructors for a number of core courses in our curriculum. Qualified candidates should hold a PhD or have achieved ABD status. Candidates available for continuing instructor opportunities are preferred.

The Department of Women and Gender Studies is a vibrant and growing department in the College of Arts and Sciences. We offer a major in Women and Gender Studies and minors in Domestic Violence Prevention and Services, Sexualities and Gender Studies, and Women’s Studies. Majors are provided the option of additional concentrations in Domestic Violence Prevention and Services and Women in Global Perspective. Typical enrollment in our introductory courses is 60 students.

Our instructors must demonstrate a commitment to pedagogical innovation and engagement, along with a mastery of the field of study.

We are currently seeking instructors for the following courses. Other course offerings will be available in the future.

WOMS 200: Introduction to Sexualities and Gender Studies:
An exploration of the variations in the social construction of lesbian, gay, bisexual, heterosexual, transsexual, transgender and queer identities and communities in contemporary American society through study of gay literature, history, theory, religious and legal issues and the arts including film, music, television, and visual arts.

WOMS 202: Women in Global Perspective: Examines how policies and laws promoted by national, international and transnational systems affect women's lives. Asks how race, ethnicity, gender, region and culture influence women’s experiences from the local to the transnational level. Explores the range of women’s voices, including resistance and activism.
