Albert Einstein once said that imagination is more important than knowledge. He believed that knowledge is limited, whereas imagination embraces the entire world, stimulates progress and gives birth to evolution. I could not agree with him more and believe that imagination is exactly what the University of Delaware's future beholds in order to grow and evolve. Rather than just being known as a research institute or a prominent college of liberal arts, I see the future of this university to be known for its innovative imagination. Every great idea comes from an imagination. Now just imagine what UD can become.
