Student Teacher Supervisor – Special Education

The School of Education seeks a qualified educator to supervise student teachers during their special education student teaching experience for the Fall 2017 semester which begins on August 28 and ends on December 11, 2017. Candidates should have a master’s degree or equivalent in special education, have a minimum of three years experience in special education, be knowledgeable about current best practices in special education, and have a teaching certificate in special education. Possibilities exist for successful candidates to supervise student teachers in future semesters.

Responsibilities include supervising students in the field, providing written feedback after observations, orienting clinical educators, creating improvement plans if appropriate, writing mid-term and final evaluations, and participating in orientation.
